Canada Post staff praises firefighters

VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

Elk Point Canada Post employees visited the Elk Point Volunteer Firefighters at last Monday's fire practice to make a very special presentation. Canada Post recently honoured the country's emergency responders – professional and volunteer, civilian and military – by unveiling five stamps depicting them in action.

One of these was the firefighters' stamp, which, Canada Post says, "depicts a determined firefighter up close as two firefighters battle an inferno in the background. The image is intentionally universal, in order to reflect part-time or full-time professionals or volunteer firefighters in any community. They all save lives, and protect property and the environment with their skills and courage."

Other stamps in the series praise the efforts of paramedics, police, search and rescue and armed forces personnel.

The visitors presented Elk Point Fire Chief Lyle Frisby and Deputy Chief Peter Hewitt with a handsome plaque depicting the firefighters stamp, on behalf of Canada Post and the local post office staff.

"It's a relentless job that takes your time 24/7 every day, and we are very grateful," postmistress Donna Yaremkevich told the firefighters. "We value you and what you do. You provide an essential public service, and with this plaque, we say thank you."

Elk Point seniors updated on programs and services

VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

The news that Service Canada "is really promoting going on line" to access programs and services didn't necessarily impress the large group of seniors attending last Wednesday's Seniors' Information Session in Elk Point, but Citizens' Services Specialist Barb Lameman assured them, "a lot of people don't want to do that, and we're always there to walk you through the process."

Based at Service Canada in St. Paul, Lameman said her office does outreach in Cold Lake and Lac La Biche, as well, and recently started accepting passport applications at the St. Paul office.

"To access our services, just call, click or visit – don't be shy," Lameman said, adding that the Internet is "quicker than paper applications, and you can update your address (for pensions and other federal programs) on line or in our office."

The federal Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) has a new application format as of September, which she says is "much faster" and can be combined with the application for Old Age Security (OAS).

Canadians age 59 will receive "a warning letter" and another just before their 60th birthday to remind them that they are eligible to apply for Canadian Pension Plan (CPP) if they so desire, Lameman said, however CPP payments for those who wait until they are 65 to access the pension are equal to approximately 25 per cent of one's previous employment income, up to a maximum amount.

Programs are available for low-income seniors, including the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS), and to access these, one must file one's income tax on time. There are also programs for Indigenous seniors, newcomer seniors, caregivers, spouses, and survivors.

FEDERAL SENIORS' SERVICES were outlined by Barb Lameman, a Citizens' Services Specialist at Service Canada, St. Paul.

LaBoucane-Benson appointed as senator

JANICE HUSER
Review Contributor

While she hasn't lived in St. Paul since the mid 1990s, one of the nation's most recently appointed senators has strong ties to the community.

Patti LaBoucane-Benson's parents still live in St. Paul, and her sister also resides in the area. As a youth, LaBoucane-Benson graduated from St. Paul Regional High School. She has lived in Edmonton/Spruce Grove since 1995.

For over 20 years, LaBoucane-Benson, who is now 49 years old, has been working with Native Counselling Services of Alberta, currently working as Director of Research, Training, and Communication. She has a PhD in Human Ecology, with a focus on Indigenous family resilience.

The thought of becoming a senator has been in the back of LaBoucane-Benson's mind for many years, and she isn't the first in her family to be offered the position.

LaBoucane-Benson's grandmother, Grace LaBoucane, was offered a senate seat by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who served as prime minister from 1957 to 1963. At that time, there was little technology to keep families connected when living far apart, and Laboucane-Benson's grandmother turned down the offer in order to stay close to her family.

"When I heard that story as a young adult, in the back of my mind, I thought I would love to go to the senate," says LaBoucane-Benson. The thought remained with her for the next 30 years.

Scarecrow entry deadline Friday

Elk Point Chamber of Commerce meets tomorrow at noon, at the Empress, and reminds both businesses and residents that the deadline to enter the 2018 Scarecrow Contest is 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 12. Enter at info@elkpointchamber.ca. Judging will take place between Oct. 14 and 20 for prizes sponsored by the Town of Elk Point and the chamber.

When the process opened up, and Prime Minister Justin Trudeau opened up the independent process that would allow any Canadian to apply, LaBoucane-Benson knew she had to try, even though she knew there would likely be hundreds of other highly qualified Albertans.

Then, on a Wednesday in September, LaBoucane-Benson received the phone call she had been hoping for. On the other end of the line was the Prime Minister Trudeau. He spoke to LaBoucane-Benson about her work in public service, and the advocacy and social justice work that has been a big part of her career.

LaBoucane-Benson says she's always felt it's been her calling to do the type of work she does, and believes in fair and equitable access to the justice system, for all Canadians.

Her goal as a senator will be to bring a community-based, grassroots perspective to the senate.

"I also hope to be a very Alberta voice," she says, adding, she aims to represent the province she is being sent to represent.

Back in St. Paul, LaBoucane-Benson's parents Terry and Elsie admit they were surprised by the news of their daughter being appointed to the senate.

Terry says that at first, he was doubtful his daughter had a chance at being appointed, but the more he thought about his daughter's accomplishments and education, and "After thinking of all the accomplishments she has achieved, with a couple of six-month stints in South America with the World Youth Organization, and her work with the University, the criminal justice system, and numerous government agencies, her experience and education should make her an excellent candidate for the senate, and advocate for Alberta," says Terry.

He adds that he and his wife are truly fortunate to have children that have accomplished so much in life.

LaBoucane-Benson is being appointed as an independent senator. She said in her conversation with Trudeau, that he said he doesn't expect her to support every bill or law put forward.

"He wants me to represent and find a voice in that senate that represents who I am and where I come from, and to think very thoughtfully about the laws that are being passed, and that would affect every Canadian, including vulnerable Canadians."

LaBoucane-Benson expressed that she is thankful for the response she's received, and added there are many "very kind things being said" about her appointment as a senator.

Along with LaBoucane-Benson, well-known Edmonton Journal columnist Paula Simons was also appointed as a senator, in the Oct. 3 announcement.

"Simons' long career in journalism has been highlighted by her many awards, including multiple National Newspaper Awards, the Alberta Civil Liberties Research Centre's Civil Liberties Award for her writing on LGBTQ rights, and two Michener Award citations for merit for public service journalism for her role in Journal investigations of Alberta's Indigenous child welfare system," reads the national press release.

Peter Boehm from Ontario, who has an extensive career in the foreign service, was also included in last week's announcement.

Individuals were recommended by the Independent Advisory Board for Senate Appointments and chosen using the process open to all Canadians. This process ensures senators are independent, reflect Canada's diversity, and are able to tackle the broad range of challenges and opportunities facing the country, according to the media release.

"These three new independent senators bring a wealth of experience with them to the Red Chamber. Whether working as a community educator and researcher, a journalist, or an ambassador, all three have gained a deep appreciation and understanding of this country. I have full confidence that they will be excellent representatives for their regions and for all Canadians," said Trudeau in the media release.

Seniors

Those providing compassionate care for a loved one are now able to receive up to 35 weeks of employment insurance benefits, Lameman said, and caregivers for family members can also receive an allowance. She also outlined survivor benefits available through CPP for a spouse and dependent children, and explained the procedure to obtain death benefits to help offset funeral costs.

Additional programs through Service Canada include CPP disability payments, job bank and job search, and employment insurance, a form of which is now available for the self-employed.

"There are many new programs," she reported, listing New Horizons grants, sessions on safety and fraud protection, along with tips on protecting one's social insurance number. There is also a benefits finder on the Service Canada website.

Mary Jane Tkachuk of Alberta Seniors and Housing was also on hand, providing the latest updates on programs, services and financial assistance for seniors available through the province.

"There are currently 580,000 seniors in Alberta, and the prediction is for over one million seniors by 2015," she said.

Six provincial programs, along with municipal and community organization-based programs, are in place to assist the senior population. Most of them are listed in the Seniors Programs and Services Information Guide, and she brought along a supply of the July 2018-June 2019 version for everyone, noting, "It's a really good guide."

Alberta's income-based programs for seniors include the Alberta Seniors Benefit, Special Needs Assistance, dental and optical assistance, Seniors Home Adaptation and Repair Program and the Seniors Property Tax Deferral Program.

You should receive a Seniors Financial Assistance Program package in the mail three months before your 65th birthday," she said, offering a toll-free number to those who had not received the information.

One very important factor in receiving this financial help, she said is to file one's income tax return on time, as that information must be in place to receive both provincial and federal assistance programs.

Tkachuk outlined the eligibility requirements for the provincial programs and said that applications go to Edmonton for approval.

Application forms and more information regarding the Seniors Home Adaptation and Repair Program and the Seniors Property Tax Deferral Program is available by calling 1-877-644-9992 or on the website: www.seniors-housing.alberta.ca

Copies of the Information Guide and information on other seniors' programs are also available at the County of St. Paul and Elk Point FCSS office in the EcoCentre.

Municipalities take different approaches to cannabis use in public

JANICE HUSER
Journal Staff

While provincial regulations will be in place on Oct. 17 when cannabis is legalized across the nation, local municipalities have also been preparing for the change with the creation of bylaws.

The Town of St. Paul's amendments to its Land Use Bylaw regarding cannabis mainly speak to rules around retail and production locations, and the town has opted to not put anything in writing regarding use of cannabis in public places. The County of St. Paul will follow a similar path.

"As long as we don't change the provincial rules, then we don't have to police public consumption. If we changed it, like say St. Albert that has said no public consumption whatsoever, we would then have to police that," according to Town of St. Paul CAO Kim Heyman. "That would mean having to hire more community police officers, which means having to buy more vehicles, invest in more training and special equipment. That all boils down to more tax dollars charged to residents."

But, if the town simply adheres to the provincial rules, then it stays a provincial issue that RCMP will deal with. She added that RCMP will still prioritize matters, and someone smoking cannabis on the street may not be as high of a priority as other matters where people's lives are at risk, for example.

"The reality is people are consuming in public now and always have," says Heyman. "Council wants to assess the situation and see if it actually becomes a problem. To draft a bylaw on consumption based on lack of information, or misinformation, would be premature, especially at the significant cost to our residents."

The provincial legislation does say that public consumption must follow the municipal smoking bylaw, she explains. And, "if council starts hearing that public consumption is becoming a problem the issue will be reassessed."

The Town of Elk Point is taking a different approach and has put together its Cannabis Consumption Bylaw 777/18. The bylaw received first reading at the end of September.

The document prohibits a person from smoking, vaping or consuming cannabis or what appears to be cannabis in any public place within town limits. In the case of a person with a medical document issued under the Access to Cannabis for Medical Purposes Regulations, they too would be unable to do so if the person is unable to produce the required document.

"Eventually, every municipality is going to have to take some kind of approach on it," said Elk Point

Mayor Lorne Young. He noted the Town of Elk Point did a public survey online about eight months ago, asking for feedback on cannabis issues, so council has used that to guide its decisions.

As the bylaw is written now, "there's no public consumption of cannabis," and smoking would only occur on private property. Young said council mirrored its bylaw based on some other Alberta municipalities that have taken the same approach.

"We would rather be more restrictive to start with," said Young, adding, it's easier to loosen up the rules later on, rather than tightening them up.

A public hearing for the Town of Elk Point's bylaw is scheduled for Oct. 22, where feedback will be heard.

Provincial Framework

Alberta has set the minimum age for purchase and consumption of cannabis at 18, according to the province's cannabis framework. This is in line with Alberta's minimum age for purchasing and consuming alcohol and tobacco, as well as the federal government's proposed minimum age for legal cannabis.

"A strong focus on public education will be an important tool to encourage responsible use and create awareness of cannabis's impact on health," reads the framework document, which is available online.

Albertans of legal age will be able to purchase cannabis products from retailers. Those retailers will receive their products from the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission (AGLC). The distribution system will be similar to the system Alberta currently has in place for alcohol.

Licensed retail establishments will be the only stores that can sell cannabis, and will not be able to sell cannabis if they sell alcohol, tobacco or pharmaceuticals, according to the provincial framework.

"Consumers will be limited to 30 grams of cannabis per transaction, which is also the legal public possession limit."

According to the framework, Albertans will be allowed to consume cannabis in their homes and in some public spaces where smoking tobacco is allowed, but use will be banned in cars. In an effort to protect minors and limit second-hand exposure, public smoking or vaping of cannabis in Alberta will be prohibited from any place where tobacco is restricted.

Specific locations where smoking will not be allowed includes any hospital property, school property or child care facility property; playgrounds; sports or playing fields; skateboard or bicycle parks; zoos; outdoor theatres; and outdoor pools or splash parks.

There will also be no consumption of cannabis at any cannabis retail outlets.

Alberta will collect revenue on the sale of cannabis. The federal and provincial governments agreed to a common set of principles that would cover the first two years of legalization. Under these principles, tax room of $1 per gram or 10 per cent of the producer price, whichever is greater, will be shared between federal and provincial governments.

The provinces will receive 75 per cent of the tax room, and can also collect an additional tax, or equivalent, of up to 10 per cent of the retail price.

Under the federal legislation, adults will be able to grow up to four plants per household from seeds purchased from licensed cannabis retailers.

"Renters, condo-dwellers and those who live in multi-family dwellings may be restricted from growing cannabis in their homes based on rules established in rental agreements or condominium bylaws," according to the framework.

Driving while impaired, whether by alcohol or cannabis or other drugs, is a serious crime and puts the safety of everyone at risk, according to the province. Impairment in the work place is also an issue the province has considered to keep workers safe.

17 on the 17th

Last week, the province announced that 17 retail locations were issued interim cannabis licenses.

"This licence allows retailers to order and have product shipped to retail locations in preparation of legalization. Interim licensees that fulfill all conditions will be issued a sales licence on Oct. 17; legally ready to open their doors to the public," reads the provincial media release.

Following Oct. 17, AGLC anticipates a steady increase in the number of stores across the province, and expects to see roughly 250 stores in business by the end of the first year. Adults in communities that do not have a retail location can place orders on albertacannabis.org.

A list of the 17 retail locations is available on the AGLC website. None of the locations are within the Lakeland area. The closest community to St. Paul to have a location on Oct. 17 is Fort Saskatchewan.

News revisited

A look at the 'Way Back When' column on this page shows just how times have changed, with the once-mothballed Murphy Oil property now the hub of Pengrowth's impressive new project and the award-winning students of the past now taking leadership and mentorship roles in the community.

Pumpkin growing is still competitive, but not here, the chamber of commerce learned its lesson about kids and straw bales, a new ambulance service has taken over fulfilling our needs and although the United Church has now closed its doors, Elk Point residents are still very proud of their fire department.

Change is inevitable, and life goes on.

YOUR VIEWS

Thoughts on Newspaper Week

MARGARET HASEIN

Publisher, Biggar Independent, Biggar, SK

It was a typical summer night, sitting around the campfire at the lake. Friends and family, lots of laughter, toasting marshmallows, partaking in a few beverages.

"Why is it that I can find out on Facebook who is changing the colour of their hair, what they are serving for supper or if the laundry has been done that day? But ... I cannot find out why the RCMP gathered north of town looking for a missing body."

This, folks, is the plain and simple truth about why journalism matters: because the facts and the truth are ferreted out by credible journalists whose writings fill the pages of community newspapers and national dailies.

No one reads newspapers anymore, you say. Wrong! Nine in 10 Canadians read content that was originally generated from a newspaper each week. Canadians turn to newspaper information on a number of issues. It could be the details of a government program, or updates on NAFTA talks, or what the stock market is doing. In the case of a community newspaper, readers seek out information on town council happenings, or school events, or delight in seeing a picture of their children on the front page.

Journalists not only gather the news, they also confirm the sources and double check the facts. In a world where information is instantaneous, it is surprising that 63 per cent of Canadians are unable to distinguish between legitimate news websites and fake news stories. Another important reason why newspaper journalism matters ... now more than ever.

There is a cost to newspaper journalism. These news gatherers like to be paid, as does everyone who works for a living. The owners of the news outlets, whether a national corporate or the independent owner, have bills to pay. One of the largest forms of revenue is advertising sales.

Unfortunately, the mistaken belief that everyone can be reached through social media has caused advertisers to abandon newspapers. Many studies find that ads in newspapers are the most trusted of all. Newspapers do not share your data, either.

Arthur Sulzberger Jr. said, "Newspapers cannot be defined by the second word—paper. They've got to be defined by the first word—news."

News is important—at the national level and at the local level. Journalism matters because democracy matters. It is what defines us as people who are fortunate to live in a free country. Newspapers matter because their credible journalists provide the facts and the truth that we deserve.

WAY BACK WHEN...

Project mothballed, pumpkin prowess, ambulance achieved

HERE'S THE NEWS THAT MADE THE HEADLINES OF THE LAKELAND REVIEW AND THE ELK POINT REVIEW FOR THE WEEK OF OCT. 8 IN...

1988

Murphy Oil's Lindbergh thermal project was mothballed, with 70 pump jacks standing idle behind the locked gates, following a decision to shut the plant down until crude oil prices rose to a level that would make operation economically feasible. Russ Hebblethwaite purchased the first ticket as the Elk Point Lioness Club started a new project, the Trip-of-the-Month-Club draw.

1993

The Bicentennial was over, but not the pumpkin growing prowess of Barb and Bill Milholland, who hauled a 79-pound beauty to the Smoky Lake Pumpkin Festival. William Singer cut the scarlet ribbon to officially open the Frog Lake Counseling Services' handsome new facility.

1998

Tyler Warawa was named the Best All-Around Student at F. G. Miller Awards Night, where Carrie Baumgardner accepted the Alberta Heritage School Citizenship Award and Keri Myshaniuk the Bruce Smith Memorial Award. Elk Point's new state-of-the-art ambulance was now in service, Fred Lambright reaching his goal of having a brand-new ambulance after 15 years of devoted service to the community.

2003

John Braga and Travis Lindquist received the awards for top academic standing in Grades 11 and 10 respectively and Darby Brooker won the St. Paul Regional Division No. 1 award for Grade 9 as F. G. Miller students celebrated their success at Awards Night. Elk Point Chamber of Commerce was looking to borrow a load of square straw bales for entertainment stage seating for the Christmas Extravaganza.

Volleyball season gets underway

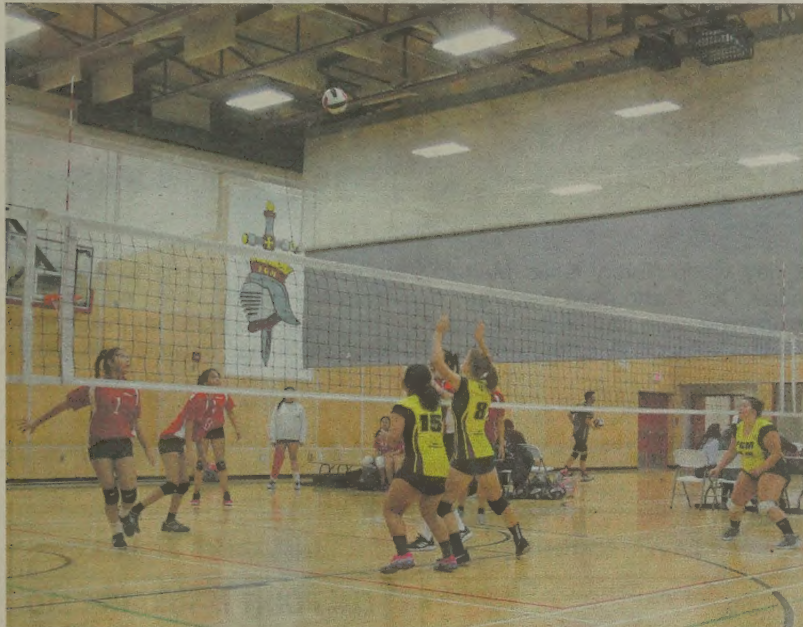

The St. Paul Athletics Association (SPAA) volleyball season is now underway, with 10 girls' teams and seven boys' teams taking part in senior high league play.

Oct. 3 featured the second week of regular league play, with teams hitting the courts in St. Paul and Elk Point. At Regional, the girls' teams from St. Paul Regional, Vilna, Two Hills and Mallaig battled against each other in a number of match ups on the court.

In Elk Point, the F. G. Miller boys' and girls' teams hit the court, along with Kihew Asiniy girls and both Ashmont teams.

Other teams taking part in the league include Kehewin, Glendon, Frog Lake, and a boys' team from Regional.

The final senior high SPAA championship tournament will be held on Nov. 14.

THE CRUSADER GIRLS took on Kihew Asiniy, above with the visitors winning two of three sets. Kihew Asiniy also defeated Ashmont in two of three sets, and Ashmont won two of three sets over the Crusaders.

F. G. MILLER CRUSADERS BOYS defeated Ashmont in all three sets to start off the season undefeated.

ELK POINT OUTREACH SCHOOL invited the community to come for lunch at last Tuesday's fundraiser, with Elk Point Co-op supplying the barbecue. The students are also selling Co-op gift cards.

F. G. Miller Crusaders jumped into the 2018 volleyball season last week, hosting Kihew Asiniy girls and Ashmont girls and boys' teams.

ORANGE SHIRT DAY, a day when "Every Child Matters," brought special guests to Elk Point Elementary School on Monday, Oct. 1, who were welcomed by principal Rob McDonald. A traditional sweetgrass blessing and drumming were part of the ceremony. The decorated hide that took centre stage reads, "St. Paul Education respectfully acknowledges the traditional lands on which we gather on Treaty 6 Territory."
